VASANTHA MAHAL,

MYSORE.

JCW:

While I am waiting for you and more talk (see cartoon !!!) will you be a lamb and please loan me the two volumes of Blavatsky's Secret Doctrine (in one of the center book cases by the windows in your library, I think....) so I can do some studying? If you can now put your hands on the two Bailey volumes - Education in the New Age and the Light of the Soul-Yoga Sutras...send them along, too. I'll return them safely when I leave for Ooty to get my things.

I hope you're going to find a spare ten minutes for me somewhere soon so we can make some decisions. (I assume you got my long memo which I sent over to catch you at lunch at your mother's last Saturday.) At the moment I am completely paralyzed, as I can't make a move until we've decided whether we're coming or going and if so where! I'm trying to be a good girl and curb my Western impatience - but I keep thinking you may forget I'm here and only think of it again twenty years from now, whereupon you will have to dig me out of the cobwebs - and what an old crone I will be by then!)

If you haven't sent me off to Ooty by then I expect to be at the opening of the Food Conference on Saturday morning to hear your speech - so make it a hum-dinger, as we say in America!

Yours,

CWM
